HOMESCHOOLING METHODS

When it comes to homeschooling, there's no one-size-fits-all approach.
Here are some of the most popular homeschooling methods:

TRADITIONAL

This method follows a similar structure to traditional schools, with textbooks, assignments, and tests. It's a great option for families who want a structured, organized approach to education.

WALDORF

Waldorf homeschooling emphasizes creativity and art and encourages children to learn through storytelling, music, and movement. It's an excellent choice for families who value artistic expression and imagination.

MONTESSORI

This approach emphasizes hands-on learning and allows children to explore their interests and learn at their own pace. It's ideal for families who want a child-led approach to education.

CHARLOTTE MASON

This method focuses on reading, writing, and narration and emphasizes the importance of living books and real-life experiences. It's a good fit for families who want to incorporate literature and real-life experiences into their curriculum.

UNSCHOOLING

This approach emphasizes child led learning and allows children to pursue their interests and passions. It's great for families who want to foster a love of learning and allow their children to direct their education.

ECLECTIC

This approach combines elements of multiple methods and allows families to tailor their curriculum to their child's needs and interests. It's ideal for families who want to create a customized education plan.

Lifestyle Learning

This approach can include activities such as field trips, hands-on projects, reading, nature walks, discussions, and conversations with experts. The goal is to help children develop critical thinking, problem-solving, and life skills while fostering a love of learning. Lifestyle learning can be a great fit for families who value flexibility, creativity and individualized education.
